Definition of Sexual Harassment

Sexual harassment in the workplace is committed by an employer, employee, manager, supervisor, agent of the employer, or any other person who, having authority, influence or moral ascendancy over another in a work environment, demands, or requires any sexual favor from the other, regardless of whether the demand, requests or requirement for submission is accepted by the object of said act. Sexual harassment is committed when:

- submission to such conduct is made, either explicitly or implicitly, a term or condition of an individual's employment, re-employment or continued employment, or in granting said individual favorable compensation, terms, conditions, promotions, or privileges; or the refusal to grant the sexual favor results in limiting, segregating or classifying the employee which in a way would discriminate, deprive or diminish employment opportunities or otherwise adversely affect said employee;
- submission to or rejection of such conduct by an individual will impair rights and privileges under existing labor laws; or
- such conduct has the purpose or effect of unreasonable interference with an individual's work performance, and/or creates an intimidating, hostile, or offensive working environment.

Examples of sexual harassment include, but are not limited to:

- unwanted physical advances;
- requests for sexual favors in exchange for favorable treatment or continued employment;
- offensive comments, jokes or other sexually oriented statements or depictions;

Upon completion of the investigation of a sexual harassment complaint, the HRMD will recommend to management the appropriate action to be taken. If HRMD concludes that harassment occurred, the offender will be subject to appropriate disciplinary action, as described below. The complainant will be informed of the disciplinary action taken.
3. In the event harassment cannot be substantiated, this finding will be communicated to the complainant in an appropriately sensitive manner. The complainant is always free to provide additional evidence for investigation.
4. If any party directly involved in a sexual harassment investigation is dissatisfied with the outcome or resolution, that individual has the right to appeal the decision to the President. The dissatisfied party should submit written comments in a timely manner to the Executive Office.
5. Employment conditions of the complainant and witnesses will be in no way adversely affected through use of this procedure, subject to paragraph 7 below.
